

BRYAN TO CAMPAIGN IN OKLAHOMA THIS WEEK

Among the democratic speakers who will stump Oklahoma between now and November, according to an announcement from the democratic state speakers' bureau, are William Jennings Bryan and Gov. Robert L. Williams. Bryan will address voters at Enid Tuesday morning. On the same afternoon he will appear at Perry. In the evening he will speak at Ponca City. Governor Williams' first speech will be at Muskogee on October 5.

COTTON YIELD 600,000 BALES, SAYS BOARD

Final estimates by the state board of agriculture place wheat production of Oklahoma at 27,341,000 bushels, oats at 16,880,000 bushels, and corn at 53,837,000 bushels. Of this amount, 27 percent of wheat, 44 percent of corn and 82 percent of cotton is still in the hands of the farmer. Cotton has a growing condition of 58 percent. The September estimate of the state's cotton crop is 592,700 bales.

REVELATIONS OF A WIFE
By Adele Garrison

My mother-in-law's proposal that I should go back to teaching while she took charge of our domestic affairs, troubled me more than I would admit. Long after Dickey was asleep I lay wide awake and wakeful turning her proposition over in my mind, looking at it from every angle.

The first flash of resentment against the idea was spent. I could see that from more than one standpoint the proposition was a logical one. My mother-in-law was compelled to be an inmate of our home. I had a wife who at new times was a new person.

My own mental attitude in the matter was extremely complex. One part of me, the part which had so rejoiced at the opportunity to earn the money paid by the Ladies' Study club, advised the acceptance of the offer. Mrs. Graham's plan. From a feminist point of view, the proposed arrangement was the only possible solution to our domestic problem.

For another part of me, the part which was a woman, resented any attempt to take away the "tending of her man's household." I fancy more women than I am doing this same dual personality in these new days of woman's work outside the home.

I tried every device I could think of to go to sleep, but could not lose myself in even a dream. Finally, in despair, I arose, unlocked the door to my bedroom and slipped on my bathrobe and my slippers and made my way into the dining room.

Turning on the light, I looked around for something to read until I should get sleepy. I had resolved to put all thoughts of my mother-in-law's proposition out of my head. Dickey did not wish it. His mother might make things unpleasant, but I did not believe she could force her plans against the opposition of both of us.

What is the matter, Mrs. Graham? Are you ill?

Mrs. Graham's soft voice sounded not behind me. As I turned, I thought again as I had many times before, how very attractive the little nurse was. She had on a blue negligee of rough cloth, made very simply, but which covered her night attire completely, while her feet, almost as small as a child's, were covered with fur-trimmed slippers of the same color as the negligee. Her abundant hair was braided in two plaits, and hung down her waist.

"You look like a sleepy little girl," I said, impulsively.

"And you look a particularly wakeful one," she returned, mischievously. "I am glad you are not ill. I feared you were when I heard you snap in the night."

Boarding School Party.

"Did I waken you?" My voice was contrite. She had so many wakeful nights with my mother-in-law that I was very anxious to have disturbed her. When her patient became conversant so that the nurse could sleep at night instead of watching, I had arranged a comfortable bed on the couch in the living room for her. It was just outside my mother-in-law's door, and Miss Somot could hear every sound her patient made in the night.

"No, you did not waken me. In fact, I have been awake nearly an hour. I have just about to come out and rob the larder of a cracker and a sip of milk in the hope that I might get to sleep again when I heard you."

"Splendid!" I ejaculated, while Miss Somot looked at me wonderingly. "Can your patient hear us out here?"

"If you could hear her snore you would be sure she could not," Miss Somot smiled. "And I partly closed her door when I left. She is safe for hours."

"Then we will have a party," I declared triumphantly. "A regular boarding school party."

A perfectly devilish time on chocolate creams and lemonade she enjoyed, laughingly.

"Exactly," I laughed back. "Only I have my chocolate creams in the house. I believe there are lemon, no, lemon." I looked at her quickly.

"I suppose you would think me crazy if I suggested a cup of coffee."

"Are you a coffee drinker, then?" she exclaimed in delight. "I would rather have a good cup of coffee than anything I know."

"But you have always said you preferred to prepare a cup of tea for your midnight larder when you were watching Mother Graham. That was why I hesitated in speaking of the coffee."

"Tea keeps me awake," she explained, "while coffee makes me sleep. I don't know."

"We must be soulmates," I exclaimed, dramatically. "Coffee keeps me to sleep, too, unless I have a headache. Then I cannot drink it. But my head is perfectly clear tonight."

Surprising Scrap Book.

"Then on to the kitchen," she raised one of her long braids of hair and waved it like a banner. We giggled like 15-year-old school girls as we tiptoed out of the dining room, turned on the light, and searched the refrigerator, pantries, bread and cake boxes for food.

"How will we ever manage to grind this coffee without being heard?" I asked, sitting down despairingly.

"That's easy," said the little nurse. "Once we get the grinder and two of those kitchen towels."

She sat down in one of the chairs, and tucked the towel, wrapped in the towels, between her knees.

"Stand in front of me," she commanded. "Close up. That's right."

Thus shielded, she ground the coffee, and true to her promise the sound of the grinding was so muffled that no one outside the room could possibly have heard it.

The hot water will be ready in another minute," I announced. The first thing I had done after turning on the kitchen light was to put some water on the gas stove. "Would you mind seeing if the percolator is all right?"

"Conditions perfect, general," with a fetching little military salute.

"Good!" I turned off the gas, and putting the proper proportions of coffee and hot water into the percolator, carried it into the dining room and attached it to an electric light socket.

"Now for our plunder," I said, as we rapidly inventoried the eatables we had found. Bread, butter, a can of sardines, eggs, sliced bacon and a dish of stewed tomatoes.

"I wish we had some oysters or cheese, then we could stir up something in the chafing dish," I said mournfully.

"The you know, I believe, I have a chafing dish recipe we can use in a scrap book which I always carry with me," responded Miss Somot. "It is in my suit case at the foot of my couch. I'll be back in a minute."

She noiselessly slipped into the living room, and returned almost instantly with a substantially-bound book in her hands. She sat down beside me at the table and opened the book.

"I couldn't live without this book," she said, extravagantly. "In it I have all sorts of treasured clippings and jottings. The things I need most I have pasted in. The chafing dish recipes are in an envelope. I just happened to have them along."

She was turning the pages as she spoke. On one page which she passed by more hurriedly than the others, were a number of Kodak pictures. I caught a flash of one which made my heart beat more quickly. Surely I had a print from the same negative in my trunk.

The tiny picture was a photograph of Jack Rickett or I was very much mistaken.

What was it doing in the scrap book of Miss Somot?

RIPLEY URGES FIGHT ON ADAMSON MEASURE

NEW YORK, Oct. 2. Edward P. Ripley, president of the Adhesion, Topeka & Santa Fe railway, sent today to the stockholders of the company an appeal to them to work for the passage of remedial legislation to meet the situation created by the passage by congress of the eight-hour law at the request of the four railway brotherhoods.

"Since the precedent of abandoning arbitration and hurriedly paying the demands of railway unions by special congressional enactment has been established," he says in his communication, "does it not behoove you to exercise your influence in favor of appropriate remedial legislation? This company believes that the act which congress has passed is unconstitutional and that steps should be taken to resist it in every lawful manner."

American Guardsman Shot By Mexican. NOGALES, Ariz., Oct. 2.—Capt. H. W. Wilson of the Second Infantry, Idaho national guard medical corps, was shot in the left thigh this afternoon while standing in front of the Southern Pacific station. The bullet is believed to have come from the Mexican side of the line and a Carranza soldier is said to have been seen running following the shooting. Captain Wilson's condition is not serious.

IF BACK HURTS TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Says Backache is sure sign you have been eating too much meat.

Uric Acid in meat clogs Kidneys, irritates the bladder.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless, inexpensive; it is a delightful, effervescent, lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.—Adv.

Dry Cleaning Is Play For Women

Put gasoline and solve in a wash boiler and save $5. In an hour.

"Ever dry clean at home?" Well, it is so easy, inexpensive and the results so pleasing you'll be surprised. Any woman can clean and renew the brightness of ribbons, silks, satins, laces, yokes, silk shirtwaists, kid gloves and shoes, furs, neckties, children's coats, suits, caps, Swiss lawn, organdy and other dresses, fancy vests, velvet, woolen garments, network, draperies, rugs, in fact, any and everything that would be ruined with soap and water.

Get two ounces of solvent at any drug store and put it in two gallons of gasoline where it quickly dissolves. Then put in the goods to be cleaned, rub a little and out they come looking as bright and fresh as new. You will find nothing fades, shrinks or wrinkles, requiring no pressing.

Any woman can do five dollars' worth of home dry cleaning in a few moments and you can't make a mistake. Your grocer or any hardware will supply the gasoline and the drug store will sell you two ounces of solvent, which is simply a gasoline soap. Then a wash boiler or large dish pan completes your dry-cleaning outfit.

As gasoline is very inflammable, be sure to be sure drycleaning out of doors or in a room away from fire or flame, with the windows left open.—Adv.
